

The Society for Descriptive Psychology 2011 Call for Papers

The 33rd Annual Meeting will be held September 22-25, 2011 (Thursday afternoon through Sunday morning), again at the Golden Hotel in colorful Golden, Colorado.

Papers are welcomed from all traditional areas of application for Descriptive Psychology:

- Clinical—psychotherapy and healthcare
- Education, teaching, human development
- Moral and ethical development
- Societies, cultures, and communities
- Organizational leadership and effectiveness
- Forensic, legal, law enforcement—the person in the eyes of the law
- Computing, knowledge representation, technical
- Spirituality, life-cycle, world reconstruction

Also welcome are papers that deal with spreading the competence in Descriptive Psychology—teaching it through formal studies or through solving practical problems and applications.

Do not hesitate to make use of video or audio materials, engage conference participants in planned tasks, or submit for co-presented papers where collaborative work was involved.

Submissions—please send me:

1. A title and 25-50 word description of your proposed presentation. Indicate what issue or problem is addressed and how Descriptive Psychology is brought to bear.
2. Any group interaction or task you have in mind beyond traditional Q & A.
3. Any audio-visual devices that you would want us to provide.

It is entirely appropriate and often desirable to converse with me via email or phone prior to submission. My program committee and others will help me plan the conference flow and balance the content. We hope to see you all at the conference this year for several days of renewal and relaxation with fellow Society members and guests!

Please call or write to me right away if you are interested but aren't ready to submit.
Please complete your submission and conversations about it by May 30.
